Social Media

Employee use of social networking reflects on both the employee and the Company. The Company does not intend to restrict the employee’s ability to have an online presence nor does it mandate what the employee can and cannot say online. It does however expect the employee to be responsible and accountable for what they post, just as if you said your posts out loud in public or published them in a newspaper. We provide these guidelines for appropriate online conduct.

Guidelines for Employees:

Never post any confidential, sensitive, personal or proprietary information about the company, its employees, or any of the Company’s customers or potential customers.

In practice this can mean a few things. Obviously, we should never post our own or other peoples’ sensitive personal, contractual or financial information online. From time to time we as a Company might post interesting pictures or videos of site, ship or port operations, but this also needs to be considered carefully. Although this sort of post can be great in terms of marketing impact, it can also contain client information of a personal or commercial sensitivity that we are not aware of. For that reason, we would ask all employees to refrain from posting content relating to operations unless senior management have cleared the material, and the client’s authorisation is secured. This kind of material would normally be released via official WaterFront Maritime Services social media channels, after the required checks.

Keep personal and professional profiles separate.

Comments made in a private group, visible to friends and family, may not always be appropriate to professional life. It’s good sense to ensure that your privacy settings are configured properly, but it’s also important to appreciate that even private posts can be forwarded, and nothing is truly secure. Whatever goes online is often there permanently. It’s also very important to ensure your passwords remain secure, as readers of posts will hold you directly accountable for anything that appears via your profile.

Social Media

If you set up a social media profile for personal reasons, you should avoid linking it to your office email and making references to the Company (for instance including a link to our web site). It's good to see WaterFront Maritime Services enjoying positive exposure online, but bear in mind that like every Company, we have a 'brand', and the way we present ourselves needs to be managed and consistent. If you have content, you'd like to post using a 'professional' platform (i.e. LinkedIn), run this past your senior management first. No employees may create an "official" Company blog, social media page, website, or any other social or online media presence without prior written authorization from the Marketing Manager.

Always bear in mind the WaterFront Maritime Services Code of Conduct.

Always remember that when you post anything online, particularly anything that can be associated with the Company, you must ensure comments abide by and are in the spirit of the WaterFront Maritime Services Code of Conduct. There is also an absolute requirement to obey local laws, including those laws governing defamation, discrimination, harassment, and copyright.

The reality is that even if your comments or profile don't explicitly reference the Company, you are still associated with WaterFront Maritime Services through your employment, and just as in 'offline' life, its best to treat people with respect.

Look out for online commentary that concerns the Company.

Hopefully when we see items posted by third parties concerning WaterFront Maritime Services, the views expressed are complimentary and positive. If, however you see comments online that are of a derogatory nature and are aimed at the Company or employees of the Company, do not respond. Please immediately escalate anything like this to your management. Whether the comments are fair or not, complaints or other negative comments need to be dealt with in a considered manner.

Make sure that readers know when the views expressed are your own.

If you are publishing personal blogs, employees should make clear to readers that the views expressed in those blogs are personal and are in no way the view of the Company.

No employees may create an "official" Company blog, social media page, website, or any other social or online media presence without prior written authorization from Marketing Manager.

Respect confidentiality.

Always work on the assumption that information shared internally is for internal communication only. Just because most correspondence is not marked as confidential; this does not mean it's for external distribution. The fact is that we all send information to colleagues, clients and vendors, based on the assumption that it will only be shared with other colleagues that need the information to do their jobs.

Take responsibility.

Ultimately, we are as individuals responsible for our own actions. The Company has no desire to take punitive measures, but in serious cases, violation of these policy guidelines may be grounds for termination. Employees are encouraged to address any concerns or questions concerning these guidelines, or any violation of them, to the Chief Operation Officer.

Whom to Contact
